Editorial Review

From the Author

Do you want to teach your children the times tables then this is for you? Some parents think that there is a magic formula for learning the times table but fact is that there is none. Children need to memorize them by heart no matter how long it takes. It will some take time for children to get used to the multiplication tables but they don't need to be hard and painstaking, they just need to spend time learning it the old fashioned way which is to sit down and learn it like a parrot. Once they have done that, then there is no looking back, they will find it easier to do maths and find it easier for them to apply mathematics in their everyday life. For those who are visual learners it might be a good idea to look at the times tables everyday so that the numbers can stick in their head. They will eventually learn it - the times tables are not very hard.
