From Plassey to Pakistan: The Family History of Iskander Mirza, the First President of Pakistan By Humayun Mirza

From Plassey to Pakistan is an extraordinary study of 300 years of Indian and Pakistani history from the perspective of the Nawab Nazims, the powerful rulers of Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa. As the last direct descendent of the Bengal Nawabs and the only surviving son of Iskander Mirza, Pakistan's first President, author Humayun Mirza explores the events leading to the British acquisition of the Indian subcontinent, India's independence, and Pakistan's secession to become a separate nation state. He then tells the story of his father's rise to power and the military coup that toppled his government, resulting in his exile. While providing an insider's view of the political events that were instrumental in shaping India and Pakistan, this book paints a picture of the fortunes of a family caught in the tides of history.

Editorial Review

Review

. . . written autobiographically by his son, the book's credibility lies in the warts-and-all treatment given to the author's father. (The Friday Times (Pakistan))

. . . the book throws light on the goings on in Bengal, Bihar and Orissa during the formative years of the British Empire detailing the intrigues and guile the British adopted in exploiting the weakness of the Nawabs. . . a very informative and interesting treatise on creation and growth of Pakistan, its relations with India and other countries. . . The appendices, and 'notes' on different chapters, add to the value of this book. (U.S.I. Journal: India's Oldest Journal Of Defense Affairs)

A superb contribution to International Studies reference collections, 'From Plassey to Pakistan' is a vividly informative and very human account which deftly combines extensive research with personal remembrance.>>>> (Library Bookwatch (December 2003))

Humayun Mirza's work is touching in that it portrays the father rather than the politician.>>>> (Syed Badrul Ahsan Asian Affairs)

. . . a very interesting and different kind of story. . . (Harvard Business School Bulletin)

A superb contribution to International Studies reference collections, 'From Plassey to Pakistan' is a vividly informative and very human account which deftly combines extensive research with personal remembrance. (Library Bookwatch (December 2003))

Humayun Mirza's work is touching in that it portrays the father rather than the politician. (Syed Badrul Ahsan Asian Affairs)
