Otolaryngology ST3 Interview Guide for National Selection By Ricardo Persaud, Amir Farboud, Konstantinos Argiris, Tahwinder Upile

An invaluable new guide for junior ENT surgeons preparing to take part in the national selection in otolaryngology process.

Although this guide is aimed primarily at ST3 candidates, much of the content is also useful to DOHNS/MRCS (ENT) and FRCS (ORL-HNS) candidates.

The main authors include two ENT Consultants and Specialists Registrars, whose clear and concise writing gives a unique insight into the UK ENT National Selection process as well as the essential tips to gain the competitive advantage for entry into higher surgical training.

The Otolaryngology ST3 interview guide for National Selection Is well illustrated and provides a clear, systematic approach to all six interview stations (portfolio, communication, clinical scenarios, clinical skills, managerial and structured interview) which candidates can follow step-by-step.

"what those candidates are about to do is probably the hardest task they will ever face," explains co-author Amir Farboud. "to be honest, if I had taken the selection process more seriously at the beginning, read more books and gone on a few more courses, then it wouldn't have taken me so many attempts to get my National Training Number (NTN). Hindsight is a powerful thing, and we hope in this book the experiences and mistakes of those who have achieved their goals can be shared, and the process can be simplified and demystified."

The Otolaryngology ST3 Interview Guide for National Selection contains core knowledge, typical questions, model answers and areas in which marks are likely to be allocated.

"Until the arrival o this guide, much of the vital information for career success in the specialty was only available by word of mouth and chance to say the least," adds co-author Ricardo Persaud. "Winning is always based on thorough preparation using the best available resources."
